Reuben's Rule

When a ball is hit into the stands at a big-league baseball game, it can be kept as a souvenir. This wasn't always the case. In 1921, Reuben Berman, a stockbroker attending a New York Giants game, was ejected from the stadium after he caught a foul ball and tossed it into the crowd instead of handing it over to security guards to be put back into play, as was customary back then. Berman sued the Giants over the incident and won, resulting in Reuben's Rule, which made it official that fans could keep MLB foul balls.

Resident Spotlight: Charles and Jan Counts

As Rusty Draper performed at the Gayhaven nightclub in 1952, Charles and Jan gazed at each other with stars in their eyes. It was love at first sight for this couple who were set up on a blind date. Charles had just returned from serving as a marine in the Korean War. Two weeks after they met, Charles asked Jan to marry him. They married in May of 1953 in Michigan. While Charles worked as a medical lab supervisor in a hospital and Ian a beautician, they raised four children. When Jan was 52, she attended college and became an x-ray technician. Charles and Jan retired in 1993. They traveled all over the US, Europe, and ventured on many cruises. Their family grew to nine grandchildren and fifteen great-grandchildren. They moved into the Villas in 2016 and fell in love with the people and the atmosphere. They have hearts of gold and their hugs and smiles are so greatly appreciated by everyone here.
